

Wheat Policy Embraces Huge Seed Requirements

Huge amounts of clover and grass seed are involved in the new government wheat policy. While the plan primarily concerns wheat, the switch from that crop to some other may revolutionize Canadian agriculture and including no have a profound influence on the seed trade and seed supply of this country, a bulletin of the Canadian Seed Trade points out.

Under the wheat policy the Dominion Government hopes to see some nine million acres of former wheat acreage diverted to summerfallow or seeded down. For the latter purpose a bonus of $5.00 per acre is offered this spring, and another $2.00 per acre paid in the spring of 1942 if the land continues in grass or clover. It is expected that thousands of Western farmers will take advantage of this offer, and at least a million acres, possibly much more, will be seeded down.

Such a procedure would require huge amounts of clover and grass seed this spring. Some idea of these requirements will be gained from the fact that it requires a minimum of 12 pounds of alfalfa or sweet clover to seed one acre. If only a million of the nine million acres to be diverted from wheat are seeded to either of these crops, then twice as much alfalfa or sweet clover would be required for this purpose alone than was produced in Western Canada last year. As a matter of fact, Canada did not produce large crops of any of the clovers last year that would be suitable for Western seeding. Permanent seeding down of much diverted wheat acreage, therefore, will probably be a gradual process.

A second factor of much importance resulting from adoption of the new wheat policy is the problem of marketing the crops from the diverted wheat acreage. Much of the output of this former wheat land will go into hogs and dairying, but there may also be a considerable amount of seed produced also. This result followed the adoption of a somewhat similar wheat policy in the United States a few years ago. Of course, seed needed to clover or grass in Western Canada this spring will not produce any seed until the summer of 1942, as practically all grasses and clovers are at least biennial. By then, of course, there may be peace in Europe and with a huge demand for clover seeds.

Undoubtedly Europe in this war is following the same course as adopted in 1914-18 when large areas of seeded down land were plowed down and put into grain. Then after peace the process was reversed and the demand for seed from Canada and other countries reached a peak. For this demand, seed authorities point out, however, only the older clovers and grasses will be wanted, not sweet clover, which is the dominant seed raised in Western Canada at present, and the kind that will likely be used for seed down much of the acreage to be diverted from wheat. Europe has shown no interest in sweet clover or in mixtures containing it.

NEW TAXES WILL MEAN REDUCING PROVINCIAL CALL
Greatly increased taxation in the federal field, must compel reduced taxation provincially.

The federal government has indicated this, in asking provincial governments to relinquish income and corporation tax fields during the war. In respect to the new 3 per cent federal gas tax, new income and corporation taxes, there will be $4,000,000 new money go into the federal treasury from Alberta. There will be $1,392,000 collected by the 3 cent gas tax.

The National Defence tax as from July 1, has been increased from 2 to 5 per cent and from 3 to 7 per cent. This will bring pressure on many small income people.

The new graduated tax rates of income tax start at 15 per cent on the first $1000 and increase by 5 per cent on each $1000. This also will impose a tax on income of all classes, designed to realize an immense revenue.

Exemption for gifts to charitable organizations has been cut from 50 to 10 per cent.

The National Defence tax minimum exemption has been raised from $500 to $600, and the exemption for dependents has been increased from $8 to $20.

Sugar tax has been raised from one to two cents a pound.

These are the forms of taxation which affect an increasingly great number of people. The increases likely to be most seriously felt are in income and national defence.

Luxuries and pleasures are bought with a price hereafter. There is new tax on beer, light wines and soft drinks; on moving picture tickets and on all forms of travel; on playing cards, cigarette lighters and cigarette tubes. The theatre tax is set at 20 per cent and this is the first time the Dominion has entered this field of taxation. There will be a levy of 5 per cent on race track bets made, another innovation. Tax on carbonic acid gas, used for soft drinks may boost the cost of the soft drink trade.

A new increase is made in excess profits tax, corporations to be taxed a minimum of 40 per cent.

The instalment income tax payment will be extended and the due date is set at March 21.

Succession duties, similar to those of the province, will be imposed.

The estimated revenue for the fiscal year is $1,150,000,000. The total expenditures are $1,768,000,000.

The British deficit in payment of its balance with Canada may bring the budget deficit to $1,500,000,000.

RUBBER IS NOW PRODUCED FROM FARM WASTES

Test Plant to Produce Motor Fuels From Wheat

Automobile tires with a life of 80,000 miles and synthetic rubber made from corn stalks, straw and waste farm fibres are the newest discoveries of research chemists, said Cecil Lamont, of the North-West Line Elevators Association, who attended the annual conference of the United States Farm Chemurgic Council just held in Chicago. Leading scientists, industrialists and heads of farm organizations and cooperatives of the United States gathered at the Chicago conference to discuss latest developments in finding new markets and industrial uses for farm products.

The North-West Line Elevators Association is urging the Federal Government to establish a Western division of the National Research Council dedicated to research in expanding markets and finding industrial uses for Canada's surplus wheat. At Chicago, the chief of the four regional research laboratories, established at a cost of $7,500,000 by the United States Government, announced that three of the four laboratories had been brought into operation by January, 1941, and the fourth will be opened within a few weeks. One hundred and seventy-five scientists are already at work in these laboratories seeking expansion of markets for farm crops produced in the United States. This number will be increased to 800 or 1000 as new research projects get under way. At the Peoria laboratory a pilot plant building has been erected and will be used to ascertain most economical means of manufacturing motor fuels from wheat, corn and other cereal crops, it was reported.

Scientists appeared at the meeting wearing test tube clothing—suits and hats produced from milk, socks from coal, shirts from wood and ties from soy beans. The synthetic products appeared the same as the genuine articles.

The Chemurgic movement aims to add additional dollars to the farmers' income through creating new markets and new uses for products of the land, said Mr. Lamont. The Chicago conference was informed that scores of new industrial uses had been developed for corn, soy beans and other farm products in the past year. Wool produced from milk was replacing rabbit and beaver hair in the manufacture of men's fur felt hats. High quality clothing, wines and paints were also being manufactured from surplus milk production and still it was estimated more than fifty billion pounds of milk were without a market.

Rubber manufacturers have prepared plans for the erection of three additional stand-by plants for the manufacture of synthetic rubber in case war in the near East should shut off essential supplies of this commodity. A synthetic rubber plant is already in operation. It is estimated that these plants would be capable of supplying America's essential supplies of rubber. The synthetic rubber would be manufactured entirely from products of American farms, forests and mines. Rubber manufacturers are already one of the greatest industrial users of farm products. Corn, cotton, potatoes, milk, sugar, pine wood and bees-wax are all now used in the production of automobile tires.

In the development of its gigantic defence plans, the United States is turning to the farm for materials to conserve essential metal supplies. Plastic materials made from soy beans and other farm products are being developed to replace metal goods. A plastic material has been developed which when used in aircraft makes the plane invisible at 3,000 feet.

One million tablets of a pneumonia antidote have been given to the Greek army by the British chemists who make the tablets.

When the British Minister in Athens learned that the Greeks' supply had run short, he asked for $1,000 from the British Greek Relief Fund to make it good.

But the chemists would accept no money for the tablets.

One million of them were accepted in person by the Duchess of Kent on behalf of Greece, her native land, and the first batch was put on a waiting aeroplane and flown off at once to Athens.

WHAT ADVERTISING REALLY IS

—WHAT IT HAS DONE
—WHAT IT CAN DO NOW

1. Advertising makes possible better merchandise at lower prices, thus serving the consumer and through service to the consumer creating greater demands for advertised products.

2. Advertising helps the manufacturer get quicker distribution, more economically and more rapidly because it builds greater and more immediate product acceptance by jobbers, dealers and consumers.

3. Advertising is the quickest and most economical aid in the introduction of new products added to an established line and in the introduction of improved products.

4. With Advertising the manufacturer can be sure of almost immediate acceptance by consumers of a new or improved product.

5. Advertising creates greater stability of production and employment by helping level peaks and valleys of seasonal demand.

6. Advertising, in highly competitive industries, by creating greater consumer interest in a type of product, often creates more business for all manufacturers in the field.

7. Advertising is a most potent force in building better public relations.

8. Advertising, by building consumer recognition of a trade-mark or trade name often enables the manufacturer of a product that has become obsolescent to build sales on another type of product which meets current consumer needs.

9. Advertising assures manufacturers better supplies of raw materials at good prices because advertisers are likely to offer a greater stability of demand.

10. Advertising helps assure the advertiser of getting the first opportunity to accept or reject patents, suggestions and other ideas for improvements in product or policy.

11. Advertising attracts to the advertiser the better type of employee.

12. Advertising, because it helps a manufacturer attract a better type of dealer and jobber, contributes to better collections and smaller credit losses.

13. Advertising helps the manufacturer in his financing.

14. Advertising, by placing the manufacturer prominently before the public, encourages better styling, improved products, better packaging and other evidences of an alert and aggressive production and merchandising policy.

15. Advertising gives the manufacturer his best protection against competition against inroads of competition.

16. Advertising helps the small manufacturer grow larger and is his best protection against competition from the larger manufacturers while he is growing.

17. Advertising helps the large manufacturer retain his position of leadership.

18. Advertising protects the advertiser against price competition of unadvertised brands.

19. Advertising fortifies every manufacturer against the rigors of depression conditions.

20. Advertising is excellent insurance for the trade-mark against infringers.

21. Advertising helps the manufacturer get the best type of jobber and dealer outlets.

22. Advertising contributes to better and more efficient sales management by attracting the best type of salesman, by giving the salesman a better proposition to sell, by helping the salesman conserve his time, because it has created wider and more intensive distribution, and by opening the buyers' doors that might otherwise be closed.

GARDEN SERVICE

Still Plenty of Time

Spring came rather early in many parts of Canada this year, but this does not mean that it is too late to plant an excellent garden. As a matter of fact, experienced gardeners point that far more people are on the early planting side than vice versa. There is little real growth for the majority of flowers and vegetables before the soil and air really warm up. With most things it is better to plant late than too early.

Of course there are some exceptions. There should be no delay in getting such things into the ground. Among the earliest vegetables will be peas, spinach, lettuce and radish. The safest rule with flowers is to plant first those kinds that would naturally seed themselves in the reader's particular district. Among such "self-seeders" are many of the poppies, the calendula, alyssum, pansies and other very hardy types. Grass is also a plant that makes its best growth in the cool weather, and new lawns or lawn repair work should be started just as soon as soil is fit to work safely. The way to tell if this moment has arrived is to observe soil texture. If muddy and inclined to stick to shovel or shovels it is not dry enough. Soil fit for gardening is moist but not sticky. It will crumble when compressed in the hand, not pack into a tight ball.

Importance of Cultivation

One can hardly over-emphasize the importance of early cultivation. A little digging in the garden now is worth a whole hour of feverish energy later on. At this time when the soil is moist it is a simple matter to get out the twigs and other weeds, to stir the ground deeply. By doing so we help push growth of vegetables and flowers and conserve moisture and plant food. If this essential job is left for a few weeks then weeds have developed tougher roots and are hard to remove and much valuable moisture is lost. In the dryer sections of Canada, frequent cultivation is depended upon to conserve the scant rainfall.

To Keep Driveways Clear

There are now liquid killers on the market to prevent grass or weeds growing in driveways. Gasoline will do the trick. Care must be exercised to keep these materials away from wanted grass, flowers or shrubbery as they destroy all growth. Another suitable material for driveways is common salt, the cheaper and coarser the better. Not only will a liberal application of this—about one or two handfuls to the square foot—destroy grass, weeds, poison ivy, etc., but it will also bind gravel and soil together into an even surface, keep down dust and repel frost.

Make Three Sowings

Gardeners are advised to divide their seed into at least three parts, sowing a third as soon as weather permits, a third a little later and the balance at the very tail-end of the planting season. In this way if frost does cut down the first batch there will be more plants coming on and the season will be lengthened by the last part of the garden sown.

World of Wheat

H. G. L. Strange,
Director, Research Department,
Searle Grain Company, Ltd.

The country of Iraq, now so much in the public eye, has from time to time during the past 6,000 years been great news.

This land once constituted the whole of the known world. It was the site of the Flood, the Garden of Eden, of the ancient cities of Ur, Babylon and Nineveh; it was the home of Abraham and of the great conqueror Nebuchadnezzar (whose career was not unlike Hitler's) and whose downfall was predicted accurately by the Biblical prophets Jeremiah, Ezekiel and Daniel.

For thousands of years this ancient country was the scene of invasions and battles by the Chaldeans, the Egyptians, the Babylonians, the Medes, the Persians and the Assyrians; these nations taking, holding and losing one after the other that historic stretch of country between the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers, credited with being then, as it still is today, the most fertile land in the world.

On this soil wheat is said to have been first grown, and it was mainly for wheat that the ancient wars and invasions were made, but today it is for the magic oil that the struggle is taking place, and on identically the same ground that has seen so many great conquerors of the past rise supreme, reign for a brief period, only each in his turn to fall.

Following factors have tended to raise price: Proposed legislation calls for higher parity loans for U.S. farmers—Reports from Balkans continue to indicate late seeding—Winnipeg Free Press estimates prairie wheat acreage reduced 5.5 million acres from 1940—General Motors-Cornell index of world wheat price has advanced 4 per cent during April. Following factors have tended to lower price: U.S. winter wheat crops continue to make good progress—U.S. corn stocks on April 1st totalled 1,423 million bushels, largest on record—Private estimates indicate U.S. winter wheat crop 640 million bushels May 1st, up 24 million bushels during month.

Handy Sewing Hint

When sewing at home, keep on hand a good substitute for tailor's chalk. Take a white cake of white toilet soap that has been worn down thin and dry and is very hard. Use the thin edge in place of the regular chalk. It will work equally well as chalk and is available in any home.

SEED-BORNE DISEASE FOUGHT WITH POWDER

The thousand natural ills that flesh is heir to have their counterpart in the plant kingdom. In the laboratories and greenhouse of G. A. Scott, Division of Botany and Plant Pathology, Ottawa, many of these vile diseases and their effects may be seen.

Some are seed-borne, others infect the soil; all are serious in that they diminish crop yields or render the produce unfit for use.

There are the seed-borne smuts which travel up the stems of oats, wheat and barley to produce their spores in the ear, forming balls of black powder where the kernels should be. This pungent powder pollutes all the grain with which it comes in contact, and the vicious cycle continues if unchecked.

Barrels of corn are perhaps even more destructive. Mr. Scott has specimens of four ears, each harboring a different rot, all taken from one farm in Western Ontario, where the diseases caused a 90 per cent crop loss in 1940. One effect the kernels from the tip down, another irregularly throughout, while a third, known as basipourum—the names of the others are unmentionable—shows no outward sign of its presence, the disease attacking the base of the kernel. But the cob is rotten to the core and collapses on pressure.

The diseases mentioned can be detected by observation. There are others, however, that cannot be except by laboratory test. These are the root rots whose name is legion and which affect the small grains, corn, peas, beans, flax and cultivated crops, as well as flowers and vegetables. Peas which appeared wholesome to the eye, when germinated in a culture dish developed loathsome masses of disease spores and showed low vitality. This is characteristic of most samples of Ontario and Quebec-grown peas, which Mr. Scott has tested, and explains the too frequent failures with this crop.

Fortunately, there are known remedies for most of these prevalent and costly diseases, and the purpose of Mr. Scott's investigations is to isolate and identify the organism and then discover the appropriate preventive or cure and the rate and method of its application. The results of Mr. Scott's research work in this field have been the means of reducing by millions of dollars the crop losses from diseases. This is accomplished by treating the seed with an organic mercury dust, and there is a dust suited to each specific purpose.

The dust seed treatment is inexpensive and easily applied. Further particulars concerning it may be obtained from all Canadian agricultural colleges and experimental stations.

THE TASK OF HAPPINESS

In my great task of happiness;
If I have moved among my race
And shown no glorious morning face;
If I have moved among my race
Have moved me not; if morning skies,
Books, and my food and summer rain
Knocked on my sullen heart in vain:
Lord, Thy most pointed pleasures take
And stab my spirit broad awake;
Or, Lord, if too obdurate, I
Choose Thou, before that spirit die,
A piercing pain, a killing sin
And to my dead heart, run them in.

THE FUNCTIONS OF THE PRESS
This is one of a series of editorials especially designed to acquaint our readers with the various functions of the Press in a democratic community.

Editorial No. 7
THE FUNCTIONS OF AN EDITOR

The title "editor" is sometimes misunderstood by newspaper readers, not because they want to misunderstand but because they have never been told just what the functions are of the person who holds this title. An editor, to explain it briefly, is one who superintends, revises or prepares literary matter for publication. The title does not necessarily mean that the policy of the newspaper is set or controlled by the editor. The duties of the other editors, city, sport, suburban, women's page and others, is simply to carry out the duties prescribed in their particular spheres. For our purpose, however, we must deal with the editor in a little different light, because in fully 90 per cent of Canada's weekly newspapers, the editor is also the publisher. In other words he fills the dual role of preparing literary matter for publication, and of deciding upon policy as well. We want to deal with the functions of an editor from this standpoint. Essentially the editor is a human being, writing and dealing with men,

WAR SAVINGS

AS INSURANCE

Buy as she is in a life or death struggle, England is not overlooking her economic future as she goes "all out" to thwart the vicious ambition of Hitler. Her citizens have been, and are, doing up a staggering total of war savings against the day when the last shot is fired and millions of Englishmen must turn around and readjust themselves to peaceful occupations. Nor is that all. Just recently, the British government has imposed income taxes on very low wages and salaries, which are to be restored to the workers after the war is over.

Shrewd Canadians will see in this savings program a worthy example to be followed in their country. The wise citizen will not only measure the amount of his purchases of war savings certificates in terms of what money means in helping our government to fight this war, but in terms of insurance for himself and his family. The man who asks himself, "How much cash am I going to need after this war is over?" is going to buy as many War Savings Certificates as his income permits. More than that he will then see more concrete reasons for doing without some of the pleasure and other luxuries in which he now indulges.

NAZI TRADE TRICK

Gives Lancashire Big Turkish Order
Behind a shipment of cotton piece goods now on its way to Turkey lies a story of British ingenuity in outwitting unfair German competition. Three years ago a British textile firm heard from one of their colonial agents that German export groups were marketing a line of cotton prints at prices from 10 to 40 per cent below the cost of production, in order that the Nazis might pile up foreign exchange.

Undeterred by this competition, which was subsidised by Hitler, the British firm set to work and produced goods admirable and far superior to Germany's. Samples were offered elsewhere, and following the commercial agreement between the United Kingdom and Turkey, so much business was obtained in the first fortnight of this year from the latter country that the order books had to be closed. Landed experts quickly refuted the Nazi claim that Lancashire is no longer able to meet German competition in this class of cotton textiles, and, following the first shipment, some 20,000 pieces are going to Turkey over the next month or so.

World's Week

BY HAROLD L. WEIR

Associate Editor of the "Edmonton Bulletin" and author of the daily column "From the News."

The sensational news of the past six days, of course, was the spectacular discovery of Herr Rudolf Hess, third mogul of the Nazi oligarchy, clinging to the ropes of a deflated parachute on a Scottish moor.

The press of the world regarded this miraculous appearance as a phenomenon no less astounding than would be the budding of blood sausages on a rose tree.

At first the inclination was to hail the advent of Herr Doktor (all Nazi bigwigs are doktors) as a great triumph for Britain.

Nazidom, exulted some editors, was breaking up. Hess had split and would divulge the secrets of the Nazi plans to Churchill. Hess hoped to bring about peace. And so on.

But a sate week for us, nobody was quite so sure. Mr. Churchill kept postponing the statement he was going to make on the matter.

A small similar to that produced by the earnest of a dead mackerel began to pervade the whole business. And observers of the scene were reduced to relying on a logical statement of possibilities which went something like this:

Hess is either sane or insane. If he is sane, his condition bears witness of the hectic and chaotic unwholesomeness of Nazi activities.

If he is sane, he either came to Britain of his own accord or was sent by Hitler.

If he came of his own volition, he either had some peace idea in mind or had fled from Hitler.

If he thought he could promote peace in such a way, his mentality, and that of the Nazis, must be outrageously perverted.

If he fled from Hitler, the Nazi organization must be breaking up. If he was sent by Hitler, the errand indicated a desperation that the Nazis have not yet admitted.

This seems to cover most of the possibilities. You can take your choice.

Before arriving at a final judgment, we must wait for further developments, carefully bearing the fact in mind that the ways of the devil are quite as incomprehensible as the ways of God.

Not quite so sensational but infinitely more important was the news from Vichy and elsewhere which indicated that the little group of traitors headed by anglophobe Admiral Darian had sold out the French people and would cast their lot with the Nazis.

It was definitely established that the illegal Vichy administration had permitted Hitler to use French bases in Syria and that French warplanes had been used to guard belligerent German ships through dangerous waters. Further revelations of Vichy duplicity and co-operation with the Nazis have been given from time to time by John T. Whiteaker of the Chicago Daily News and the Edmonton Bulletin.

The Vichy crew has inferred that it has decided upon collaboration with Germany because it believes that Germany is going to win the war.

This is a vicious and criminal lie. Vichy does not believe a such thing. Darian and his miserable accomplices are men who stand to gain personally by handing over France to Hitler. They have no thought of the welfare of France at all. They are out for personal profit.

The great majority of the French people know that their only hope for the freedom and the restoration of France lies in a British victory.

In spite of the wretched Vichy liars, the French people believe implicitly that Britain will win.

But Vichy traitors were not the only leaders this week who gave signs of selling out their people.

Josef Stalin gave formal permission to his army fliers to enlist in the Iraqi rebel army which, with Hitler's assistance, proposes to throw out the British.

It was stated at Moscow that this step was taken as a "reprisal" for British assistance to Finland during the Russian-Finnish war.

If Stalin is obsessed with a spirit of retaliation against Britain, it means he has decided to crawl into bed with Hitler.

This is not the will of the Russian people who regard the Germans as traditional enemies.

Another sell out.

NEW HUT FOR RED CROSS

Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, former Prime Minister of Canada, recently presented, on behalf of the Canadian Red Cross, a new recreation hut to Canadian soldiers serving "somewhere in England," according to information received at the Society's headquarters. The event was attended by several hundred civilians and soldiers and Lady Patricia Ramsay declared the building open to Canadian troops.

During the last war Canadian troops had a recreation hut on the same spot. Re-opened soon after this war commenced, it was badly in need of repairs. The Canadian Red Cross overseas contributed generously toward the repairing and building of the canteen and it is now almost entirely new.

Brigadier General Victor O'Hara, Commanding Officer, thanked the Red Cross on behalf of the troops and Alfred Steve Brodie, a private in a Toronto regiment, spoke for the troops.

In presenting the hut Mr. Bennett said: "I trust you will look upon it as a symbol of a great people fighting the world over for liberty."

Mrs. Pat Patterson is down from the City to holiday with her mother Mrs. McIntee.

Last week Miss Pat Chartier, was taken to Edmonton for medical aid. An operation was necessary but from latest reports she is progressing favorably. Her father was in the City over the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. I. McGregor of Hughenden will be residents here shortly. Mr. McGregor having recently been appointed Agent for the National Grain Elevator.

Mr. R. I. Bond expects to take over another garage business in the near future. He delivered a new Pontiac sedan to Mr. Art Gibson, Hope Valley on Monday.

Saturday afternoon Mrs. L. I. Carl left for Coal Harbor, Vancouver Island, where she will join her husband.

The Sunday school was re-organized on Sunday and all the congregations are asked to note. Officers and teachers were appointed.

EDGERTON

Considerable improvement is being made to the sidewalk on the south side of 2nd avenue where cement is gradually taking place of boards. Rumors of favoritism prompted us to make enquiries, with the result that we found out this—This Council is and the householders on that side of the avenue are paying for the labor, which rather squeezes the rumor.

Work has commenced on a new porch for St. Mary's Church (Ang.) and judging by what is done already, a much greater degree of convenience and comfort for all concerned, will be the ultimate result.

The C. G. I. T. held a mother and daughter banquet last Thursday evening and it is understood that the affair was very satisfactory. Following the delicious repast, Eleanor Redmond, was the very able toast mistress with Mrs. Reg. Kingston making suitable reply in a brief but to the point speech. The organization has Mrs. Morrison to thank for stirring up fresh interest among its members, thus renewing the activities both business and social, of a club which has been dormant for some time.

Many of the local boys now in uniform were home on 48 hours leave last Friday and Saturday. After the show on Friday night, the V.V.R.'s sponsored a dance in the boy's honour, and as may be expected this was very well patronized with everyone having a most enjoyable time until almost 3 a.m.

We are very sorry to learn that the Rev. C. H. and Mrs. Morrison will be leaving next month. It is understood that poor health is the reason for Mr. Morrison's resignation, and all irrespective of denomination who have known this very popular cleric and his wife, cannot help feeling profoundly regretful to see them leave this village.

Just in case you have not noticed how this stuff called time is vanishing, perhaps you will be startled a trifle by the fact that in one month from today, the longest day will be here, then in no time at all down will go the sun and UP will go the light bills. Sad thought isn't it?

OF THESE THREE LOVES

By Louis Arthur Cunningham

CHAPTER IX

But Gillian could not have let Simon put that ring on her finger, not until her hands were free of Jeffrey Clay's story. She could not. Tomorrow she would wear it with pride. Tonight when she consigned that thing to the kindly flames, there would be no ring of Simon's on her finger.

It was late when Simon left Gillian at her apartment. He said he was tired after the hurry and excitement of his trip. He would go straight home. She gave Simon plenty of time to be on his way, then moved out of the doorway and along the street. She stood for a while across the square from the Printery. She crossed the square and then opened the door.

She carried it to the fireplace.

She went cautiously upstairs, feeling her way. Finding the manuscript, she laid it on Simon's desk, pulled it from the envelope and carried it to the fireplace. She found a book of matches in her pocket and struck one and carried the flame to the top shelf. It caught slowly, the flame creeping over the black lines like the tide across the sand, blotting them out forever.

Faster, faster, she urged — burn faster. Journal of My Loves — one by one the words of the title were eaten away, as his name had been eaten before them.

"Thank God," she whispered. "Thank God, it's done now, and nothing can ever bring it back."

The lights went on. For a moment, dazzled, she did not realize what had happened. She stood up, turned slowly, to meet Simon's startled eyes.

"Why, Gillian! Whatever are you doing?"

"I was burning — some rubbish."

"Oh, some odds and ends. Nothing important."

"But why in the dark, Gillian? I left my brief case here and remembered when I was part way home some things I wanted to look at."

"Oh, it's nothing, Simon. I —" her hand flew to her throat, and her eyes dilated and all her life seemed to stop. She could not move, could not speak.

could not tear her gaze from the envelope on Simon's desk. From where she stood she could see the bold letters of the label — "Journal of My Loves." And "Jeffrey Clay" below it.

Simon walked over to the desk and picked it up.

"You burned the story Jeffrey left. You think it is the fire rather than let me know and let the world know what you really were to Jeffrey Clay. I — it is hard to believe!"

She managed to speak at last. "I've learned to take it, from you. Now you can take it, from me. All from me; I burned his story, yes! And if he'd written a thousand like it, I'd have burned them too. And if you think the world is any worse off for not being able to read the records of a small-time Don Juan, you're making a sad mistake."

She said finally: "It's all over, Anse — between Simon and me." She laughed. "Jeffrey Clay left a manuscript that I read, and I would not have Simon read it — I will not say why. Tonight I burned that manuscript and Simon found out. The title of the book was 'Journal of My Loves'."

"You still care for Simon — you know you do."

"I think I'll have to go my way and let him go his. I — I am not going back to the printery any more. I can't stay here, Anse. Can't we go back to Rydal?"

"We'll go."

"We can't start too soon to suit me, Anse."

Jon Hillier came to see them after they had been at Rydal less than a month. Gillian felt absurdly glad when she opened the door and saw him standing there.

"I am glad to see you, Jon. What is going on in Montreal? I — I'm starved for news. I came down here to forget all about the place, but I'm afraid there's no getting back."

"You mean it's all over between you and Killigrew?" Jon's voice was eager, the hand that held his cigarette, trembled. "If that's so, Gillian, you know that I —"

"Daring Jon!" She put her hand over his.

"I want only the right to protect you, Gillian; to make you happy. Won't you give me the chance?"

"It wouldn't be fair to you, Jon. No; that's all past and done with."

"If he comes back to you —"

"If he comes back to me or if he doesn't, I'll feel just the same towards him. I found love, and once you find it you never lose it."

"There are things between Simon and me," she spoke very slowly — "that may never be cleared up. If he wants me he must take a great deal on trust. I think he is a great enough to do that. If he really loves me enough, he will come back to me. I want him to come back — want him on any terms."

"He told me to ask you, Gillian."

"He — he sent you here?"

"No. He said 'I should have told you at first, but I had to know how you felt about it. And now I know. Shall I tell him to come?'"

"Yes, please, Jon — tell him to come. Tell him I'll be waiting."

He came the next day, when only Anse was in the cottage, and Anse shook his hand and showed him the path across the fields Gillian had taken. "If you follow that path you're bound to meet her."

He walked slowly through the fallow fields.

Gillian stood still and expectant when she saw him. She said, "I am so glad you came, Simon. I — I don't think I could have waited any longer. I don't care what you think of me, Simon, just so long as you love me."

"I think only the best of you, Gillian. I would not ask you again to marry me if I couldn't take you with a heart free from doubt. I believe in you — believe in you with all my soul."

"As you've always believed in those you love," she said, and came into his arms and raised her face to his kiss.

They were married three days later in the little graystone church in Rydal where many other Meades before her had stood before the high altar and said the words she said.

Anse was there, tall and straight and very much on parade. He looked at her in the pale green dress she wore and thought that he had never seen her lovelier than at this moment.

Deborah was there, looking aloof and mournful, and Jon Hillier was there, sharing his happiness, forgetting his own loss in seeing Gillian happy.

The reception was at Rydal House. It was a happy hour and if the ghosts of Jeffrey Clay and Hilary were there at the long, white glittering table with its tall candelabra, no one saw them.

"I adore you, Gillian," Simon whispered during Anse's lovely speech, of which she scarcely heard a word.

"Forgive me if ever I hurt you."

"Maybe I am the one to ask forgiveness, Simon. Let us say that on both sides all things are forgiven. Today and forever."

At the bend on the road on Malvern Hill where one, looking back, has the last glimpse of Rydal, he stopped the car and drew her into his arms and kissed her. He said, holding her close, looking earnestly down at her, "I couldn't wait any longer for this. It's so hard to realize that we're married at last, Gillian, that nothing can take you from me now."

"Nothing can, Simon."

They drove into the dusk of a bleak and windy day.

"I'll drive until the moon comes," he said gaily, "and then there's a little lost village I went to years ago — alone. I was happy there and I'd like to take you to it."

Singing, they came to the inn and drove into the yard and had no trouble finding the landlord, for he came, fat and jolly and washing his hands with invisible soap and water, to greet them.

"Madame et monsieur! You are most welcome. An' my best room is, certainly, at your disposal. We will go up there now and while you rest I will make ready some good supper, no?"

It was a large and pleasant room into which he ushered them.

Gillian was looking at the books on the little table by the bed. Simon looked too. "Hello," he said. "Here is a copy of Jeff's first poem — and by Jove, with his autograph too!"

The innkeeper nodded delightedly. "He stays here one time for a week, that young poet. He an' his wife, he forgot this book. M'sieur and Madame Jones, he tells me, but I see his picture in that book he left. Ah, they were happy those two — so young, so much in love — Jeff, she call him an' he call her Hilary?"

The door closed behind him. Simon stood as if turned to stone and the book slid slowly from his hand and fell to the floor. Gillian looked at him and looked away. Even she could not intrude upon this moment.

Here, in this forgotten place, he had found the truth at last, the cruel truth that she had risked her happiness to keep from him.

"I'm sorry, Simon. I fought always to keep it from you. It was all in his book, the story of their love, that was why I burned it. He turned from her to me. She came to me then and that was why I'd have no more to do with him. But for them it was over. She caught cold, took no care of herself — and he, well, you know now."

"I'm not thinking of them, Gillian," he said, his head bowed. "I'll never again think of them. It's of you I'm thinking — of what you did, of what you suffered."

He took her in his arms and held her close, her wet cheeks against his. "It was worth while, Simon," she said. "I wanted you to keep your faith in love and in the things you loved."

"I have faith now. I've seen something that I didn't know existed in this world. It is in your heart, Gillian, and it's a shrine at which I can always worship now and know that no falseness can enter there."

TRAVELLING APPLES NEED

32 DEGREES; BANANAS, 60

When they are being shipped across the country in railway refrigerator cars, apples and pears have to be kept at a temperature of 32 degrees, according to an article on perishable traffic in the May issue of The Canadian National Magazine. Tomatoes require more warmth — 48 degrees, and bananas like it as high as 60. Thirty-six degrees are enough for fresh meat and export bacon needs no more than 30.

The refrigerator cars have an ice bunker at each end holding about 2 tons of ice each. In winter when artificial heat is required, portable charcoal heaters are placed in the bunkers. In summer, the temperature in the car is regulated by furnishing salt along with the ice.

HOLIDAY FARES

TO PACIFIC COAST

WINNIPEG. — Special holiday fares to the Pacific Coast over Canadian National lines will be available during the entire summer vacation season, according to an announcement made this week by Osborne Scott, passenger traffic manager.

These fares, which are good for 30 days, offer an ideal holiday travel opportunity for office workers and all others who receive an annual vacation period. They will be on sale Friday, Saturday and Sunday of each week from May 30th to September 28th, from all stations in Ontario, west of Port Arthur and Armstrong, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and in Alberta, east of Calgary and Edmonton, Jasper, New Westminster, Vancouver, Victoria and Nanaimo.

If your holiday is limited to two weeks, plan to spend at least one day at Jasper Park Lodge, the famous summer resort in the Canadian Rockies, which opens on June 15th and take in the newest and most scenic drive in the Rockies — the Columbia Icefield Drive.

The low economy fares will be available in coaches, as well as in tourist and standard sleeping cars, and stopovers will be allowed at any point.

Weak from May 30th to September 28th, from all stations in Ontario, west of Port Arthur and Armstrong, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and in Alberta, east of Calgary and Edmonton, Jasper, New Westminster, Vancouver, Victoria and Nanaimo.

Hints for the Household

Brimming with Health - Basket and Child

By BETTY BARLOW

The first and foremost prerequisite to child health is food to build strong, straight bodies with a high resistance to ill. And the time to start this type of building is when we first have tiny lives to nourish into man and womanhood.

So suppose we go marketing for foods to accomplish just these things. Foods to build bodies, regulate their processes and protect against diseases, as well as furnish energy for the many activities of the child.

We'll want to include protective foods which contain minerals and vitamins — the so-called "must foods" — fruits, vegetables, and milk. One of the protective factors most often deficient in the average diet is vitamin C, which promotes general good health, aids in the development of perfect teeth and good bone structure, guards against tooth decay and gum troubles, and prevents scurvy.

Oranges and lemons are perfect sources for this vitamin, also provide calcium, iron, and phosphorus, as well as such diuretic values as vitamin A, B and G, alkaline salts, fruit acids, and sugars. Since vitamin C is not stored by the body, it must constantly be maintained as the child grows. Daily orange juice is one of the easiest ways to provide it. Children in below-average ages require almost twice as much of this vitamin in proportion to their weight as do adults. In fact, according to research, for every 100 pounds of body weight, at least one and six-tenths ounces of orange juice is recommended for the normal daily requirement to provide the sole source of vitamin C. Growing active children who need more of the benefits from this vitamin may consume a larger amount. Besides these "must foods" (fruits, vegetables, and milk), we'll want eggs, meat, finely ground nuts, bread, cereals, butter and other fats, sweets in small amounts, and fluids. The basket will be brimming with essentials for perfect child development. And we must not forget in our search, there are some items we can't carry in a basket but must be included on a list for health: such as — fresh air, exercise, cleanliness, rest, and pure water.

After the foods and other essentials are selected, the problems of proper proportions, combinations, and regularity arise. Once these are established, the child's health and happiness are well provided not just for the day but in a sense for years to come.

Between Meals: Oranges are so filled with important health benefits that they may well be eaten between meals or before going to bed. A glass of orange juice or the "easy to peel" fruit is handy for these purposes. Children do not need to be urged to eat more oranges or drink more orange juice. The tempting orange taste is a favorite from the start. A popular combination is:

Orange Egg Milk Shake
1 cup orange juice
1 cup milk
1 egg, slightly beaten
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon grated orange peel
Beat or shake well with ice to chill. Serves 2.

Happy Dishes

He seems to be all dressed up for a party but perhaps he is going out for an afternoon stroll. Or possibly it is bedtime and he is taking his before-bed bite.

Anyway, his expression proves that he is enjoying a "happy" dish — the kind of a dish that causes little boys and girls to smile as they eat.

"Happy" dishes can be "good for you" dishes. The one pictured above furnishes milk in a delightful form. It requires no eggs, no baking and no boiling. It's a healthful old standby with some frills and a new name and is certainly entitled to a place at the top of the "happy dish" list. Try serving it to your children. Here is the simple recipe:

Snow White with Raisin Dwarfs
2 package vanilla rennet powder
1 pint milk (ordinary or homogenized)

1/2 cup whipping cream
Snow white angel food cake
Seeded raisins rolled in raspberry rennet powder or pink sugar

Set out 5 individual dessert glasses. Warm milk slowly, stirring constantly. Test a drop on inside of wrist frequently. When COMFORTABLY WARM, (130° F.), not hot, remove at once from heat. Stir rennet powder into milk briskly until dissolved — not over one minute. Pour at once, while still liquid, into individual dessert glasses. Place a slice of snow white angel food cake in each dessert while still liquid. Do not move until firm — about 15 minutes. Chill in refrigerator. When ready to serve, top each dessert with whipped cream and seven seeded raisins rolled in raspberry rennet powder or pink sugar.

FLU EPIDEMIC

Ever since the time of Hippocrates (400 B.C.) huge tides of flu have washed the world. These epidemics have not always run in cycles of 20 years. In modern times the span between them seems to be about 3 decades. A wave of flu inundated Europe and the North American continent during the 1830's. There were others in 1847, 1889 and the greatest scourge of the kind in history occurred just after the last war in 1918-19, which killed more than 20 millions of people all over the world and more than half a million in the U.S. and Canada.

TAKES OFF GRIME WITHOUT SCOURING

NO need for hard rubbing and scrubbing when you use a solution of Gillett's Pure Flake Lye. It cuts right through grease, clears clogged drains, keeps out-houses sanitary and odorless, scours pots and pans, takes the hard work out of heavy cleaning. Keep a tin always handy.

FREE BOOKLET — The Gillett's Lye Booklet describes the many uses of this powerful cleaning agent. It also contains the formula for making a free copy to Standard Brands Ltd., Toronto, Ont.

"Never discolors eye in hot water. The action of the eye itself heats the water."

The cause is a number of mysterious germs only one group of which, the influenza virus A, was identified seven years ago. This virus is now rampant on the Pacific Coast.

Under mild and smiling skies, an epidemic of influenza flared recently in California; swept into Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Arizona, Nevada, and New Mexico. Fortunately the visitation was a mild one. The victims had only slight fever, sniffles, headache, sore limbs, backache and a tight feeling in the chest. Los Angeles had 50,000 cases with but 70 deaths, most of these being due to terminal pneumonia. The schools with over 700 pupils had about 20 per cent of the children ill, but very properly the schools still carried on. Half the pretty girls of Hollywood were sick in bed — the proper place for them. Sixteen members of the University of Southern California Football team were put out of business. Hospital staffs were sadly depleted. Men in training camps to the number of 1400 were down with flu.

Dr. Horsfall, Jr. of the Rockefeller Institute has made a vaccine from influenza virus A, and the virus which causes distemper in dogs. He hopes that it will confer immunity for at least 3 months from all types of flu.

DUCHESS OF KENT FILMED

With Six Mannequins Showing Record Dress Collection

Before being shipped off to New York, a selection from the largest single collection of dresses ever sent abroad from Britain was shown by six mannequins to the Duchess of Kent. The Duchess agreed to the event being filmed for display overseas.

There are 2000 of them — dresses, suits, a few dinner gowns and one wedding dress, all in wool from famous Yorkshire and Scottish looms. Each is an "off the peg" model, costing anything between 30/- and £20. The collection has been made by the Women's Fashion's Export Group to be shown in New York in May. In order to meet the demand without delay, the 80 manufacturers responsible for the resources have agreed to pool their resources so that, if one workroom is bombed, its orders can be passed on to another in the group.

NEWS & VIEWS OF TOWN AND DISTRICT

NEXT SATURDAY IS EMPIRE DAY AND IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE DOMINION PROCLAMATION ALL STORES WILL BE CLOSED FOR THE HOLIDAY. THERE WILL BE NO EARLY CLOSING TODAY (WED.) Shoppers should govern themselves accordingly, and remember the business places will be open late on Friday evening.

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. Joe Pelrin, of Wainwright, at the Wainwright Municipal Hospital on May 19th, a boy.

After a visit to Ontario, during which time she was present at the passing away and funeral of her father, Mrs. W. E. Washburn has now returned home.

The Town Band under Conductor Alderman was out in full force on Saturday night last to give "the lads" a cheery parting on their entrapment for army duties.

Mr. Amos Yauke was here from Zelma, Sask., to attend the funeral of his brother who passed away during the week. Another brother, Andrew, was also here from his home in Sanctuary, Sask.

Quite a big business was done on Saturday night last when three prominent town ladies conducted a "hot dog" stand at the theatre which netted big returns for their efforts for the Red Cross.

Prepare now to INVEST IN VICTORY BONDS!

Mrs. Lewis, of Calgary, is in town on a visit to her sister, Miss L. Gehring.

Sympathies are expressed to Mrs. O. R. Hannah, who during the week and received a cablegram telling of the death of her mother, Mrs. Jaa. Cooper, at her home in Dundee, Scotland.

Following a long stay in the Peace River country, Mrs. R. Wakefield has now returned here.

A happy time was spent at the river at Fabyan on Sunday by a truck load of young people, whose picnic was enjoyable.

Henry Yauke, of the Edmonton Puffers, was here for the funeral of his father on Monday last, returning to his quarters in the west on the same day.

Prepare now to INVEST IN VICTORY BONDS!

Mr. Harold Taylor drove over to Lloydminster on Sunday last and found that Mrs. Taylor who is in hospital there is improving nicely following her recent operation.

Owing to Saturday next being a Dominion holiday, the Red Cross work room will be open on Friday afternoon instead of as usual.

RED CROSS NOTES

The Work Committee of the local branch of the Red Cross appreciated the splendid way in which both individuals and groups are responding to the emergency call caused by the recent bombing of supplies in England.

The kind and quality of the work can be seen in the display in the window of the furniture store, and the committee thank Mr. McLeod for the privilege of showing it there.

Even war work has its lighter moments, as those could testify who visited the work room while the "babes" were being dressed for the window display. Those engaged in this pleasant task, merrily and with voluble enthusiasm relieved childhood days. Thanks to the owners of said baby dolls for lending them on this occasion.

The new venture of selling "hot-dogs" in front of the theatre on Saturday evening's is away to a good start. Watch for our ladies and patronize them on coming Saturday nights. 17.52 was the result of this.

Don't forget the Red Cross community Auction Sale on Saturday, May 31st. We solicit your patronage on that date.

We gratefully acknowledge receipt of two quilts from the local W. L. and the proceeds from the fine Musical Evening put on by the Sisters of St. Joseph, amounting to $17.47. Also thanks to Mrs. T. Johns and Mrs. Harrington for materials for clothing and quilt blocks.

H. M. W.
During the picture show as above, the Town Band will play a number of selections and a silver collection is to be taken to aid those who have been "bombed out" in England during the war raids.

LOYDMINSTER BULL SALE TUESDAY NEXT
Farmers should plan to attend the Lloydminster Bull Sale to be held Tuesday next, May 27th.

Thirty-two Shorthorns and twenty-eight Herefords T.B. Tested Bulls, many sired by imported bulls, or sons of imported stock, will be sold in addition to a considerable number of herd sires, there is also an outstanding class of young bulls.

The sale will start at 1:30 p.m.
